

WOMEN WIN BATTLE OF GREELEY SQUARE

Baffle Store Sleuths, and Miss Sandford Even Makes Manager Grin.

DRAW GIRL CLERKS INTO UNION RANKS

Officer 2,635 Observes Strict Neutrality and Blocks Intervention.

The Retail Clerks' Union and the Women's Trade Union League, which are holding meetings outside department stores in the effort to organize the saleswomen, put in a lively hour at closing time last night at a store near Greeley Square.

They not only had two meetings, with Miss Helen Schloss speaking from an automobile at one entrance and Miss Elizabeth Dwyer speaking from a stand at another entrance, but Miss Mary K. Sandford, chairman of the party, constituted herself barker, and did it so well that she ended by proving herself the chief attraction of the affair.

The speakers were on hand at 7 o'clock, but it was not until 7:30 before the girls began to pour out through the employees' entrances. Four of the store managers and several detectives gathered before the door from which most of them were leaving, and Miss Sandford began to fear that the girls would be sent away and the meeting be left without the audience it wanted.

"Give me those folders," she cried to Miss Hilda Svensen, W. T. U. L. organizer. She took a huge pile of "calls to organize" and took her stand near the managers before the door.

"Come, girls," she cried, "I may not give these folders out—it is against the law—but you can take them from my hand. If you're afraid to take them, write to No. 10 East 15th street and we'll tell you about the union; and be sure and tell us whether the store pays you for the extra hour it has kept you working to-night."

Miss Sandford added to her remarks about the store until one of the managers decided that she needed attention. He took his stand at her elbow.

"Officer," he told the nearest patrolman, Officer 2,635, "make this woman stand near her automobile, as her permit directs."

But Officer 2,635 was on the side of the women. "That permit," he told the manager, "calls for outside this store, and she's within her rights."

Swarms of girls were coming out now, and almost every one stopped and took a folder. Down the street Miss Schloss was telling the girls that under present conditions they were slaves, and Miss Sandford, in penetrating tones, urged all who passed to go and hear Miss Schloss. The store managers kept their eyes fixed upon her, but she gave no excuse for arrest.

"That man would like to have me arrested," she told the girls. "He would like to have me spend the night in the Tombs. Pass on, girls, don't block the sidewalk. He likes to see the sidewalk blocked with customers, but he doesn't want you to block it. What, must I move?"

Big Lieutenant Hart, of the 23d Precinct, had arrived with a sergeant and another patrolman, and he gave Miss Sandford a push in the back. "Keep moving," he ordered.

Miss Sandford, protesting that Officer 2,635 had told her she could stand on the curb, moved. The manager, sticking tight to her elbow, moved with her. Up and down they went, attended by a swirling crowd of girls, who grabbed at the folders and listened to the running fire of remarks from Miss Sandford. She introduced the faithful and impassive manager to the crowds as her escort, and commented upon his chivalry until his impassiveness broke up in a grin.

The meeting broke up without an arrest, though several times it looked as if one was imminent. Miss Sandford said that twenty girls from this store had joined the union, and many from other department stores.

HEADLINES WORK MISCHIEF

Ambassador Page's Idea of Improving Newspapers.

London, Dec. 13.—The American Ambassador and Mrs. Walter H. Page were the guests of the London District Institute of Journalists at the annual dinner of that organization to-night. A telegram was sent to the King mentioning the fact that Ambassador and Mrs. Page were the chief guests and trusting that the work of the institute was promoting the friendship of nations and would receive his majesty's recognition. The King replied, expressing appreciation for the co-operation of the institute in promoting international good will.

Ambassador Page thanked the British press for its cordiality to himself and said that the reporting of American things in English newspapers and English things in American had shown a very great improvement in recent years. The relations between the two countries were advanced by the press and were largely dependent upon the manner in which events were chronicled.

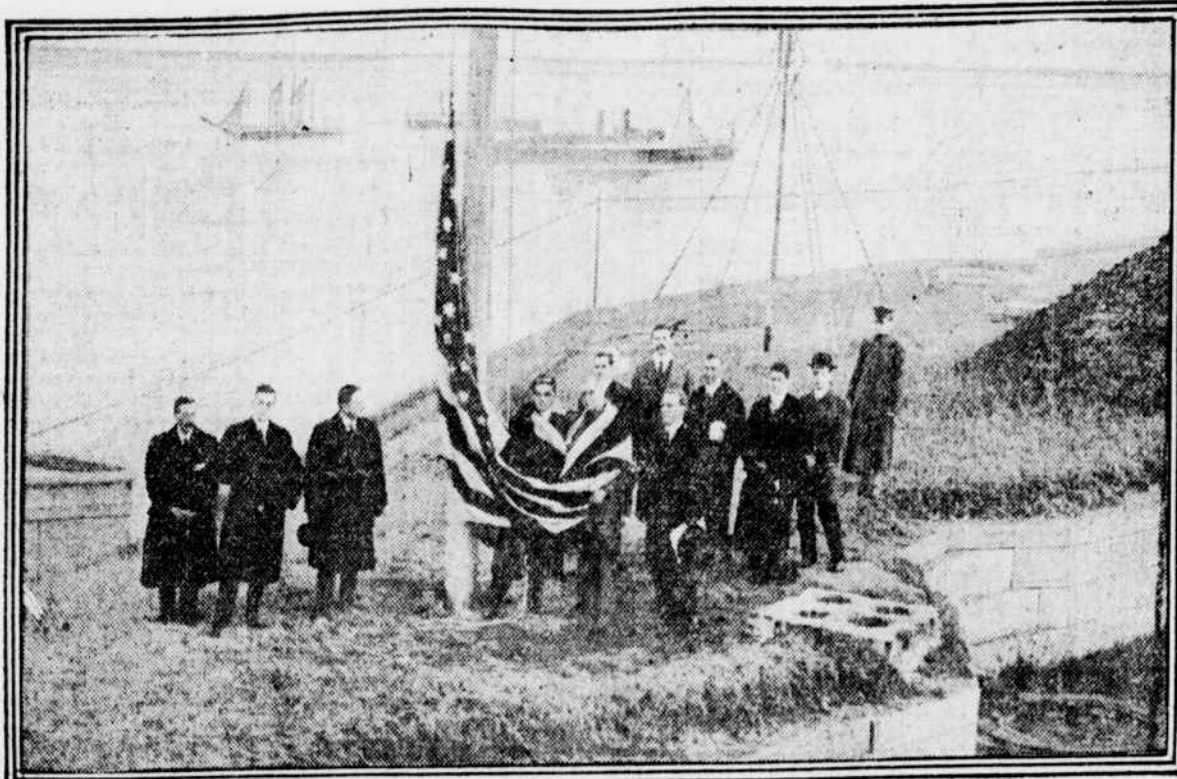

But, he added, much mischief was still done by undue haste and by a desire for scare headlines and exclusive information. He thought that something better could be done by having the true ideals and the spirit of each country correctly reflected in the journals. It would be well if the journalists of each country, during the celebration of the centenary of peace next year, studied on the spot the principles of the government system and newspaper work on the other side. They would thus become ambassadors between the two nations.

N. Y. Telephone Co. Gets Medal

At the annual dinner of the American Museum of Safety last night at the Waldorf, the New York Telephone Company was awarded the gold medal given by the Travelers' Insurance Company to the American employer who achieved the greatest success in protecting the lives and limbs of employees. The medal was presented to U. N. Bethell, president of the New York Telephone Company, in recognition of the steps the corporation had taken to protect its employees, chiefly its women workers.

During the last year the company, at its own expense, established an employees' benefit fund, which provides for pensions for accidents and disability payments to injured and sick, and for life insurance.

FLAG RAISING AT INDIAN MEMORIAL SITE, STATEN ISLAND.

INDIAN RAISES FLAG

Ceremony at Wadsworth for Wanamaker Expedition.

Up into the blue sky above Fort Wadsworth late yesterday afternoon fluttered the Stars and Stripes, raised by Henry Roe Cloud, a full-blooded Winnebago Indian, to commemorate the return of the Rodman Wanamaker expedition to the red men on the very spot where, in years to come, a national memorial is to rise in honor of his race. Last February thirty chiefs joined President Taft in the ceremonies that attended its first raising, on the same terrace, overlooking the waters of the bay, swearing fealty to it, for themselves and their people.

Since then it has been flown by the 189 tribes of the West, and the warriors who first saw it through the haze of battle have united to do it honor. Chief Two Moons, of the northern Cheyennes, whose fury at the Little Big Horn swept away the last vestige of Custer's resistance, came East, worn and ill, to attend its raising at Fort Wadsworth last winter, and then hurried back to his own people, that he might raise it for them before he died.

The success of the expedition was due, chiefly, to the persistence and courage of its leader, Dr. Joseph K. Dixon, whose initiative brought him into touch with every tribe in the West. Dr. Dixon said he was optimistic of the Indian, so long as he could be kept away from his early surroundings.

Mr. Cloud made a brief speech, in which he spoke of the cordiality of the welcome accorded William Penn and other settlers by the Indians. "The nation has before it the problem," he continued, "of whether its complex civilization shall crush the red man or be his salvation, and this question should be before us as we commemorate his glorious past, and we should seek an idealistic and Christian solution." Others who spoke were Frank H. Abbott, ex-Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and George Vaux, Jr., chairman of the Board of Indian Commissioners.

SAYS DOG CHEWED CHOW

China Bows to England in Garden City Canine War.

[From The Tribune Correspondent.] Hempstead, Long Island, Dec. 13.—Hi Li Lo, the pet Chow of Mrs. Junnie Balke, of Garden City, may live until morning, but he will never look exactly as he did before he met Beauty, the English bulldog of R. W. Turner. Beauty and his master will have to appear before Charles F. Gittens, justice of the peace, next week to answer to the complaint of Mrs. Balke.

The owner of the injured Chow says that Beauty ought to be muzzled, as he is a dangerous animal. In answer Mr. Turner will assert that his dog is even tempered, but playful, and that the whole misunderstanding arose from Hi Li Lo's ignorance of the English language and his inability to take a joke. No denial will be made to the charge that Beauty did tear a few mouthfuls of hair from the coat of the Chow.

No harm would have followed, Mr. Turner asserts, if Hi Li Lo had accepted the attention in the spirit in which it was made. Instead, the Mongolian snarled and barked at Beauty, so says the defendant. In Pekinese. This injected the race issue and Beauty did his best to reduce the available supply of Chinese cheap labor. Mr. Turner will ask the court to keep all Asiatic dogs which are incapable of assimilating American ideas and customs out of Garden City.

PEBBLE ENDS OWL CHASE

Police Prepare Trap and Shin Tree, but Bird Escapes.

A gray owl, which escaped from its cage in the Bronx Zoo, alighted in a dead tree near the stable of the Alexander avenue police station, in East 138th street and Alexander avenue, yesterday afternoon. A crowd of children and grownups soon gathered to watch the owl.

Several small boys tried to climb the tree, and the noise attracted the attention of the police. While Patrolmen Johnson and Murray were discussing the best way to get at the owl Lieutenant Michael Hickey came along. He took in the situation at a glance, and sent Johnson to a fisherman's supply store for a long bamboo fishing rod. He then took a barrel hoop, fastened a gunny sack around the hoop and made this secure to the pole.

Amid the plaudits of the crowd Johnson and Murray ascended the tree. Murray lifted the pole slowly and reached in the direction of the owl. Just as the opening of the sack was about to descend on the bird a boy hit it with a pebble. The owl uttered a loud "Who, who" and flew off in a northwesterly direction over the Harlem River, leaving the policemen holding the bag.

TO USE RED CROSS SEALS

Several Firms Thus to Help War on Tuberculosis.

If every man, woman and child in Manhattan and The Bronx will purchase one Red Cross seal between now and Christmas it will mean that the Committee on Prevention of Tuberculosis will have at least $10,000 more this year than last to use toward stamping out tuberculosis.

A number of clothing and drygoods firms have agreed to use the Red Cross seals on their mail matter during the holiday season. Among the former are

Julius C. Bernheim, Howard C. Brokaw, Scott Browning, William R. Corwin, Joseph Frankel, William Goldman, Harry D. Kohn, Arthur C. Levi, Leon Mann, Marcus M. Marks, William Numburg and J. Wener. The drygoods firms are

John Daniell Sons & Sons, Gimbel Brothers, the Greenhut-Siegel-Cooper Company, H. C. F. Koch & Co., James McCree & Co., the O'Neill-Adams Company, Saks & Co., the Simpson-Crawford Company and John Wanamaker.

STOVER FOR PARK HALL OF FAME

Vanishing Commissioner's Picture May Be Added to Arsenal Gallery.

HE HAD IGNORED HIS PREDECESSOR

Collection Includes Mayors and Park Heads Who Helped Make City's History.

To Charles B. Stover, who resigned recently as Park Commissioner for the boroughs of Manhattan and Richmond after he had taken French leave of his job six weeks earlier, is due the credit of creating a hall of fame of park worthies. Fifteen individuals were so honored by the Commissioner, and their pictures adorn the walls of the room in the Arsenal occupied by the head of the parks. Now it is suggested by some of the officials of the department that Mr. Stover's picture be added to the hall of fame.

Photographs in handsome frames of the following men are represented: Andrew J. Downing, Calvert Vaux, Frederick Law Olmsted, Egbert L. Viele, Waldo Hutchins, Charles H. Russell, Fernando Wood, Andrew H. Green, James F. Wenman, Ambrose C. Kingsland, John D. Grimmins, Moses Herman, William R. Wilcox, John J. Pallas and George C. Clauson.

Some were Park Commissioners, but others were Mayors of the city, who played an important part in the creation of the park system and its maintenance. Commissioner Stover never gave his reasons for leaving out persons that he did, as, for instance, his predecessor, Henry Smith, or Samuel Parsons, Jr.

Lack of wall space, however, would be a valid alibi if he wanted to defend his course, as every inch is occupied. Ambrose C. Kingsland, a former Mayor of the city, is given the credit for suggesting a large public park in the city, the development of which resulted in the present Central Park. He died on October 13, 1878.

Fernando Wood, Mayor of the city three times, also was an exponent of a park system. He died on February 11, 1881. Frederick Law Olmsted and Calvert Vaux were the designers of the park, and for a time Mr. Olmsted was president and treasurer of the Park Commission.

Egbert Ludovickus Viele, a soldier in the Mexican War, an Indian fighter in 1812, and who was in the Civil War, was the chief engineer of Central Park. He was a graduate of West Point. In 1883 he became Park Commissioner, and the year following was made president of the commission.

Andrew H. Green, originator of the plan for the greater city, was also identified with the park system. A permanent Green memorial at the upper end of Central Park is in contemplation.

But Commissioner Stover was not interested only in bringing together pictures of men identified with the growth of the park system. He also collected plans, drawings and much more about it. Much of this will be at the disposal from now on of park heads. He felt, he often declared, that sufficient attention had not been given to the matter of collecting and caring for such things, which would be of even greater interest in the years to come.

NEW HAMPSHIRE DINNER

Gov. Felker Brings Greetings to Her Sons in This State.

The New Hampshire Society gave its annual dinner at Delmonico's last night. Ex-Governor Frank J. Quinby was toastmaster, and the speakers were Governor Felker, George H. Moses, former Minister to Greece; Harry A. Cushing, the Rev. Frank Babb and William L. Cressy. General W. D. Sawyer read a memorial on Henry E. Howland, who was for ten years president of the society. A portrait of Judge Howland was among the decorations.

Governor Felker brought the official greeting of New Hampshire to her sons living in this state. Philip Carpenter recalled the many famous people who came from the state, and among them Horace Greeley and Mrs. Sarah J. Hale, author of "Mary Had a Little Lamb."

Mr. Cressy said: "Men coming from my neighborhood have succeeded in all their aims—one the New Haven line, and just look at our insane asylum, a well-known New Yorker has just run away from here to go to it."
